NOAH SORKOW
REAL-LIFE VETERANS SUPERHERO

When 13-year-old Noah had to pick a good deed to perform for his bar mitzvah (a celebration for a Jewish boy who has turned 13), he knew right away that he wanted to help the veterans in his hometown.

Already a go-kart enthusiast, Noah decided to raise money for wounded soldiers by asking friends and family to pledge money for every 65 laps he made around his local track. In the end, he raised over $2,400 for the cause.

About Noah, one veteran said, "I think it's pretty amazing to see someone his age making that kind of contribution."
